

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

November 23rd, 2018

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

This afternoon, the President took the resignation of now former Secretary of the Army Wendell Parker. The President thanks the Secretary for his service and wishes him well in the future.

However, we feel it is prudent to set the record straight on a claim made by Secretary Parker in his resignation letter. Mr. Parker has held two senior defense department posts in 2018 and in both cases managed to start a conflict with the leader of the primary branch of our military. Under President Walsh it was Generals Reinhardt and Lewandowski, and just recently President Snyder had to personally intervene as a result of Mr. Parker's overreach into the army.

The President has brought forth a number of policy visions for the army, and recently requested that the founder run targeted advertising on the US Army group in order to use it as a selling point for the United States (this was previously announced by the President), allowing benefits for people who enlisted as a member of our Armed Forces and became a Citizen. This would have allowed ROBLOX players who were interested in the military genre to become attracted by the United States Army, and potentially find interest in the political side of our work here - though it wouldn't be a requirement to participate.

This request was not approved (it was disregarded), and the President is not in possession of a magic wand able to force thousands of people to enlist in the Army. The President formed a council on army strategy on the 9th November, to which Mr. Parker's only contribution was to fight with the Chief of Staff of the Army.

The President will announce a new nominee in due course.
